and, with the collateral documents, they give perhaps the most complete and accurate account of the beginning of aerial navigation, enlivened with the humor and speculation characteristic of the writer. It is certainly remarkable that Franklin, in the midst of diplomatic and social duties, could have found time to investigate personally this new invention of which he at once appreciated the possibilities.

> These documents were written by Franklin from Paris about 200 years ago. They are copies made by me from the original letters which I purchased from Dodd, Mead & Co., New York City, in December, 1905, and previously had belonged to G. M. Williamson, of Grandview-on-the-Hudson, to whom they had come from Vienna. None of the letters appear in Sparks' edition of Franklin's Works, and while all but one are included in the collections compiled by Bigelow and Smyth, there are numerous inaccuracies, some of which will be specified hereafter.

> The documents which I publish are copies of Franklin's letters, made on thin paper in a copying press (probably the rotary machine invented by Franklin), and all but one bear his signature in ink. They have corrections in the author's hand-writing and, except for a few words, are quite legible. They were purchased by me from Dodd, Mead & Co., in December, 1905, and previously had belonged to G. M. Williamson, of Grandview-on-the-Hudson, to whom they had come from Vienna. None of the letters appear in Sparks' edition of Franklin's Works, and while all but one are included in the collections compiled by Bigelow and Smyth, there are numerous inaccuracies, some of which will be specified hereafter.

> Some of the letters are printed exactly as they appeared in the originals, others are corrected according to the copy-pieces. In general it may be said that, whereas Bigelow gives the text without paragraphs, capital letters or the old spelling, Smyth follows the originals more closely. In view of the historic and scientific interest of these letters, they are now printed exactly according to the press-copies. The letter dated November 30, appears never to have been printed and whereas Smyth reproduced the letter of November 21 from the University of Pennsylvania draft, this or another draft (or possibly this copy) was in the possession of the French aeronaut, Gaston Tissandier, about 1887.

> This book contains three drafts of letters which were written by Franklin in 1783. One of them is a letter to Benjamin Franklin from John Adams, dated November 30, 1783. Another is a letter to Benjamin Franklin from Thomas Edison, dated November 21, 1783. A third is a letter to Benjamin Franklin from Thomas Edison, dated November 21, 1783. All three letters are signed "Gaston Tissandier".
